LUBRICATION IS A JOB WE DO Better...

No one knows your Buick like we do. We have Buick "know-how." We follow Factory Lubrication Instructions. We use the right lubricants.

WHEELS AND BEARINGS should be examined and bearings lubricated every 10,000 miles, should bearings be neglected the repair expense could be sizeable.

CHASSIS and body lubrication calls for an expert with a Buick lube chart to follow to be sure he gets every place that's recommended.

ENGINE lubrication comes from fresh, new oil that is changed every 1000 miles for longer life to the whole engine.

TIGHTENING TOO — while we're all over the car doing a thorough lubrication job, it is wise to let us do a good tightening at the same time. The whole car runs better, feels better and rides better.

A BIT OF HEAVEN IN '47

By PAUL D. EMMONS

Well, the date of this writing is Sunday May 18th. "I Am An American Day." And possibly the most sinister news for Americans today is the report, just out, that England has made a secret agreement with Russia to send her the latest type of jet planes and other military secrets in return for a million tons of grain and other food.

If this be true one is almost tempted to ask if England has sold her soul for a mess of pottage. The report states that she is worried over the possible effect on the United States. Does this worry spring from a guilty conscience?

How about the three and a quarter billion dollars which we loaned her, and which she is now said to have developed jet planes even better than our own. Of course self preservation is a natural law of nature, and England undoubtedly is up against it. Her future looks dark and grim. She has no money to pay for them, and is losing her grip on their principal sources which have been available to her in the past—namely India.

Right here we come to one significant point. Russia is the greatest source of raw materials in the world today. Think that one over.

If you can't lick 'em, join 'em. This is a maxim of practical politics for a long time. And we know for a certainty that there is a large group of Laborers in England who feel that it would be to her advantage to join hands with Russia.

This war has changed Great Britain from a dominant nation to a highly vulnerable one. Her sea power has been nullified by the latest developments in air power and the atomic bomb. As with us, her most likely opponent in case of another war would be Russia. A surprise attack by a Russian air force equipped with atomic bombs would wipe England off the map in no time.

In fact, it might not even require an airplane attack. The buzz bomb is being developed to a point where Russia could send a broadcast of them from within her own borders directed with deadly effect against the British Isles.

It's a hair trigger world we're living in. Adding everything up, the leftists can point to two great advantages England might get from joining hands with Russia, namely, to be free from fear of attack, and access to raw materials.

Now where does that leave us? Well, that's another headache for this nation to face. It would be the bitterest irony if we should bolster up Greece and Turkey to help preserve England's life line, and then have England go Communist.

Whatever the outcome, there is only one answer as far as we are concerned. "I Am An American Day" needs to have another word added to it. In both spirit and deed, it should be, "I Am A Strong American."

Editorial

THE VALUE OF WORK

The advice given by Barney Baruch is usually sound. The only trouble with most of us is that we seldom heed it. Not long ago Mr. Baruch made an address in which he said that the necessity of hard work if we are to return to a normal way of living. Some of his remarks were so sound that they will bear repeating:

"One of the world's delusions," he declared, "is that the world can be set right by borrowing money. It can get going only if men work. . . . Men and women will have to work longer and harder for some time to come, in order to catch up with the ravages of war, if we are to regain our heritage, if we are to be able to afford . . . If we adopted, wholeheartedly a 51/2-day, 44-hour week, with no strikes or layoffs, to January 1, 1949, the result would be electrifying. Production would flow smoothly, a sense of security would return to worker and employer, and the reaction upon the economy of the world would be deep and lasting."

We are all complaining about the high cost of living. Producers and distributors are complaining about taxes, and labor is naturally seeking higher wages because it costs so much more to live than formerly.

What most of us seem to forget is that it takes more money to give man a decent wage, and it takes more than regulation or reduced taxes to lower the cost of living. What it really requires is what Mr. Baruch emphasizes in the statement quoted above, and that is higher hard, steady work.

A higher cost of living is due to a demand which is greater than the supply. If you increase income without increasing production, then the wage increase will do nobody good and will inflict on many people a great deal of harm. The way to reduce the cost of living is to produce more goods. When the supply is equal to the demand, then prices will go down.

Increasing wages in itself is no cure, although we are all like to get more money whenever we can obtain it. What is required is more goods produced per week and per man.

President Truman some time ago said that unless the cost of living is cut, wages will have to be made higher. He seems completely not to understand the philosophy which Mr. Baruch has aggravated the day.

What we want is production that will reduce the cost for everyone.

"Cutting Corners" On Your Budget?
Skipping Breakfast Is No Economy

New Amphibian
A Postwar Wonder

Many a kitchen mathematician needs the knowledge of an Einstein in time, space and relativity to run within the budget these days. Cut corners if you will by buying bargains in food, but don't cut down on the amount of food served or the good, old scheme of three square meals a day.

Some folks practice what economists call "cutting down on certain meals such as breakfast. False, indeed, is this kind of kitchen logic because breakfast can be the thirteenth meal of the day and it can be eaten at any time of day and it can be eaten in any place and it can be eaten in any way.

The morning meal is logical, since the body has been without food for 12 hours. But if it is the day's first meal, there is the danger of mid-morning nibbling on "snack" foods and heavier lunches which throw backward the clock. Backing this up, modern nutritionists say breakfast should provide a fourth to a third of the day's total food requirements. A basic pattern for breakfast calls for fruit, cereal, milk, bread and butter. Built on this plan the morning meal is a nutritious, nourishing meal.

The thrifty serving of cereal with milk and sugar presents a "bargain" meal. It is not only nutritious, but the satisfaction of every nutritional need except that of vitamin level. It provides top-quality protein, the vitamins of the B complex (thiamine, riboflavin and niacin) as well as the minerals, calcium, phosphorus and iron and energy. For active people or growing children, an egg or breakfast meat may be added to the basic pattern of fruit, cereal, milk, bread and butter.

GOOD BREAKFASTS ARE GOOD ECONOMY
There are more than a dozen thrifty cereals from which to choose. Easy to serve, the modern cereal takes from three to five minutes. The ready-to-eat cereal hot cereals have an average easily served from box to bowl. They are in many appetizing shapes, flavors and textures. The fruit course in the breakfast pattern may be thrifty, too. Fruits in season, stewed fruits and canned fruit juices are all good buys. Bread, too, is a thrifty food.

Get a good start on an economical day by getting a good start with the thrifty pattern of fruit, cereal, milk, bread and butter. You'll find that this is an intelligent way to keep both budget and good nutrition within reasonable bounds.
